

Murphy Canyon Youth Center

This center is located in a suburban community of San Diego. The structure is designed to function as a community youth recreation center. By using different roof types, the design breaks down the size of the structure creating a village like image. The entry hall invokes a street scene environment using exterior and durable type materials. This project received a citation from the U.S. Navy for design excellence as well as being the winner of a RFP design competition.

CLIENT:
U.S. Navy

LOCATION:
San Diego, California

COST:
$1,600,000

COMPLETION:
1996

ARCHITECTURE TEAM
Principal in Charge:
Ralph J. Roesling,
FAIA

PROJECT
PARTICIPANTS
Architect of Record:
Roesling Nakamura
Terada Architects

Owner:
EFA
Mr. Tex Freeman
(Previous Project Manager)
No Contact Available